Dear Friends,

Welcome to Louisville as we celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the Kentucky Commission on Human Rights. As the proud representative of Downtown Louisville and the neighborhoods that boarder the Central Business District on the East and on the West, I recognize that the vestiges of many of the civil rights challenges that faced our forebearers in the 1960's are still prevalent today. I appreciate the on-going commitment of the Commission to safeguard all Kentuckians from discrimination in any form.

I am grateful to each of you for attending this conference and for your support throughout the year. Let us celebrate today and continue our collective efforts for improving our Commonwealth and our Nation.

With warmest regards, I am ...

Very truly yours,
